Strother Not Out of Danger, but Able to Appear Against His Assailants.

A tall mulatto, named Eandolph Strother was prosecuting witness in Judge Miller's court yesterday afternoon against Henry and Charles Marshall, brothers, who were many shades darker than Strother, and their father, George Marshall.

mitting a deadly assault on Strother, who is married to a sister of the Marshall boys. Strother appeared in court with his head entirely consuled by a mass of bandages, which reconstituted the wearing of a woman's limit hood in lieu of his hat.

The Irmus cooursed in Brown's court, weather and the participants.

The times course in mowns course some seasons, and the participants were arrested by Policeman Keily, of the Fifth. The physician who attended Strother told the court that he was not yet out of danger. He described the five wounds on his head, and said that a heavy blow on Strother's forehead had made a deep deat in the skull, fracturing it and severing an artery. The room in which be found the wounded man resembled a shughter-house more than mything else. Other restimony showed that Strother had been maliciously and brotally assaulted with-out cause by the Marshall brothers, who employed giass and stone jars as their weapons of attack. Judge biller sent the brothers to jaff, without the, for three mouths each, and dismissed the case against the father, who redeep gash on his face while playing the role of peacemaker.

Acting Socretary Wike, of the Tressury Department, to-day, on receipt of a telegram from Gen. Trucy stating that he had been refused permission to see Howard, Mr. Morton a under conchunan, telegraphed Dr. Sen-ner, by whom the request was refused, di-recting that Gen. Tracy's request be granted. To Gen. Tracy's statement that Howard was employed as a domestic servant and should be released at once, the assistant secretary released at once, the assistant secretary

There is no more fascinating study to the mind feminine than dainty trifles for the din-

The shops at present are full of quaint and pretty designs for all manner of things that one can use, in silver, china, and glass, For instance, who could imagine anything more appropriate for cherries and strawber-ries than a silver-fluted dish, with a bunch of therries, all in silver, for a handle for the one, and a strawberry bowl, fashioned like a leaf, Very attractive also is the grape stand hung with silver fruit, and for peaches and other fruit a pyramid of shell-shaped dishes.

A silver nut dish rejoices in the quite Egyp-Louis XV ware is still in high favor, as some of the new designs show. The regetable dishes are rather odd in design, consisting of three partitions, drainer and hot water compartments. The entree dish and

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.-Parisian fashions to-day are inaugurated by a few of the prominent French star actresses in the modern drama. Are American modes to be introduced by American actresses? It looks so. The majority of them now order their toilets from the world's leading artists in dress, and American taste has so impressed its exclusive elegance upon the designers of femininity's finest feathers they plane themselves upon the beauty and the originality of the creations they make for American wome they make for American women.

One of the most elegantly dressed women on the American stage to-day is Miss Eisle De Wolf, New York's society actress, and one of the very few members of the Four Hundred who have added the grace of their gentie birth and breeding to the stage, and keep up their affiliations with the Brahmin set.

A couple of tolists that Miss De Wolf wears in "The Bauble Shop" keeps her and lience in a murmur of admiration. They are especially successful apart from their intrinsic siyle and beauty, because they suggest the refinement. beauty, because they suggest the refinement of a lady of fashion and family in her own drawing-room, and nothing of the over-scentiantion of fashion that crowds a toilet Immensely chic and extremely good form is a morning calling toilet in light blue Sicilienne silk. It is not of the new bluet (corn-flower blue) that is destined to be inopeliesly common, but a clear, pale sky blue. The skirt is a marvei of fullness, yards and yards wide around the bottom, and yet has not an extra inch of material round the waist at save the inch of material round the waist at save the back.

Cut a circle from tissue paper. Make a hole in the center, and fit it upon a dell. This will give you the effect so far as the pattern of the skirt goes. About the foot of the skirt, which is so full it fals as it flares toward the bottom into overlapping and ever-changing folds, there are flights of butterflies in black, little ones and large ones mounting nearly to the knees, and then falling back to one er two. These recherche desorations are not embroidered or appliqued on the silk, but are inserted in it. The silk under each butterfly, which is of lace and of exquisite workmanship, is cut away to show the white silk petti-

The bodice is also circular in shape, with W. H. Moses & Sons—Turkish Arm Chairs more fullness over the bust and between the shoulders than at the neck. It is made whole shoulders than at the neck. It is made whole in front and fastens down the left shoulder, in front and fastens down the left shoulder, around the arm, and under it to the sashes.

There are two of these. One is of lovely like purple velvet of the shade of a pansy petal, and there is a crushed stock collar to match this cristure, which is finished off at the left of the waits with some careless loops and a cluster of velvet pansies. The second centure is of black velvet, and this is tied into a joint of the waits with some careless loops and a cluster of velvet pansies. Paquin, of Paris, created a superb dinner ress worn by Miss Do Wolf, which has aftaring gored skirt, perfectly plain, of salmon pink satin. The under side of the satin is as yellow as gold, but although the yellow warp is not permitted to stamp its individuality very strongly upon the pink woof, neverthe ess the pink surface shimmers in every ray of light with a faint golden flush. The silk manufacturers this season verily have wrested the last color secret from gens and skies. The bodice of white chiffon just covering the bust in a square line back and front. The shoulders are two crushed straps of apple green relvet. This velvet, which by artificial light is softened to look almost blue, forms the chow sleeves that are large puffs, and the wrinkled ceinture. Old yellow lace forms water compartments. The entree dish and biscuit box are both very heavily chased.

One of the very newest things out is the stand. It is in silver and is designed for butter, cheese, and biscuit; cheese and biscuit form one course at every well-regulated dinner table or course dinner. There are some ill-advised persons who always want butter for the stand biscuit and for these I present the standard of the stan ter, cheese, and biscult; cheese and the form one course at every well-regulated dinner table or course dinner. There are some ill-ndvised persons who always want butter for their biscult and for these. I presume, was designed this dish, which would hardly be used, however, except at the family table.

The shape is caused and shows and an interlining make the wrap sit all round in interlining make the wrap sit all round in very smart style. A beautiful old lace scarf in isory tints is draped about the collar, forming a short cape and javot falls down the fronts, where each corner is ornamented with a choux or rosette of velver ribbon and long ends.

HARMONIOUS DRESSING. It Is Not a Matter of Matching Shades or

A clever woman, according to an authority on dress, can wear two apparently unlike and unconnected garments and make the world think they have been intended for each other from time immemorial. In illustration of her meaning madame pointed to a skirt and waist which were lying ready to be sent home. "They do not seem parts of the same gown, is it not so?" said she, and the listeners heartily agreed that they did not. The skirt was of tobacco brown crepon, flaring to an unusual degree even in this period of flares. The waist was of blue silk, entirely covered with black accordion-platted chiffon. There with black according plated children. There was no trace of brown crepon about that bodies and no suggestion of blue slik about the skirt. The waist had a high collar and cuffs of gold braid. But madame assured her hearers that when the particular woman who was to wear those garments donned them they would seem more harmonious than the bite serge bodice and the bite serge skirt which were cut from the same piece of goods "And so it will be," continued madame "when she wears the bodice with her black. silk skirt or her brown crepon skirt with the green velvet bodice.
